GIRLS NOT FORGOTTEN

About 150 participants rally at the Bring Back Our Girls demonstration at the Saskatchewan legislative grounds in Regina on Thursday. They were demanding that the Nigerian government rescue 276 girls abducted last month by Islamist militant group Boko Haram from a school in northern Nigeria. Organizers Rebecca Otitoju, left, and Jane Ekong, centre, hope that such rallies convince Nigerian authorities to take action. For more on this story, visit metronews.ca. U of S offers to reinstate fired professor

'Blunder.' School president apologizes to Robert Buckingham, who was dismissed after taking public stand against proposed cuts

The University of Saskatchewan president says the school "made a blunder" in firing a professor this week for speaking out on budget cuts, and has offered him back his tenure position.

Senior leaders at the school said on Thursday that Robert Buckingham's termination had been reconsidered and reversed.

"We accept that we made a blunder, and we hold tenure in the same high regard that everyone does throughout the world," U of S president Ilene Busch-Vishniac told The Canadian Press.

"We will be doing a post-mortem to figure out how we ended up in this awkward position, to fix it and to make sure it never happens again."

Busch-Vishniac said the school is not trying to muzzle professors. Academic leaders such as deans, she said, can disagree with the proposed changes in private.

"But once a decision is made, we expect all of the leadership of the university to align behind that decision," she explained, noting that Buckingham is not being allowed to return to his former post of executive director of the school of public health.

The Canadian Press could not reach Buckingham for comment, but he told local media that he will accept the tenure position.

Busch-Vishniac added, "We are sorry for the action we took, and apologize to Dr. Buckingham for dismissing him from the university."

Buckingham was escorted from the campus by police on Wednesday after writing a letter to the Saskatchewan Party government and Opposition New Democrats about the overhaul.

The school's plan includes cutting jobs, reorganizing its administration and dissolving some programs to try to save about $25 million.

The decision to reinstate Buckingham came after Premier Brad Wall said he wanted an urgent meeting between the province and the university's board. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Middle-Age Energy Booster

#65 NPN 80044126

Doctors on the Dr. Oz TV Show said that the most frequent complaint they get is "Being Very Tired", some call it fatigue. They have no energy or interest to do anything. More food is not the answer. Drugs are not the answer either as the Johns Hopkins Medical School puts it: "The fact is, all medicines, whether OTC or prescription, carry some risk". It needs a "key" to rejuvenate your own natural systems that fell asleep. Bell provides that key with: Selenium, spermine and spermidine, which are polyamines found in radishes, cucumbers and oats as well as all human cells. Nothing could be more natural than topping off that supply. There is no risk. The Wayne State University researched these ingredients for years and Bell guarantees your satisfaction. It is all right to be skeptical and for that reason we show a few results below and have hundreds more, if you go on our website under #7 Erosyn, which has exactly the same ingredients. This rejuvenation means that most men and women may have youthful feelings again for their partner. Those who want it can resume their intimate relationship. We supply the proof that it works. If incontinence plays a role: McMaster University says that 65% of middle-aged women suffer with incontinence and this is the main reason why many withdraw from intimacy. This can be overcome within days by drinking the Bell Bladder Control Tea #4b available in the same stores as Middle-Age Energy Booster. No more rushing to the bathroom and no padding or diapers needed anymore. Many people wrote we changed their lives.

■ Bell Middle Age Energy Booster changed our lives. All I can say is am very satisfied and so is my lovely wife. I am so happy I have my youthful energy back. My wife thanks you too. Raoul Martin, 52, Woodstock, ON ■ I should have started using Bell Middle-Age Energy Booster years ago, when I noticed things were starting to slack off. The results were much better than I ever hoped for. David Buckley, 42, Peterborough, ON ■ Being in my forties I felt a loss of energy and zest for life. I have tried every product on the market. David Woods found guilty of murder in death of his wife

Domestic issues.
Court heard testimony throughout the trial that the couple's marriage was on the rocks

A Saskatoon man painted in court as a husband angered by his wife's many sexual dalliances with other men has been found guilty of first-degree murder in her death.

David Woods was convicted by a jury of nine women and three men Thursday of strangling Dorothy Woods and dumping her body in a culvert south of Saskatoon between Nov. 11, 2011 and Jan. 4, 2012.

The Crown had argued David Woods killed his wife due to the looming stress of a divorce and the financial issues that would ensue.

The defence suggested he had been framed by the real killer and evidence planted in his garage.

Court heard testimony throughout the trial that the couple's marriage was on the rocks, with Dorothy having sexual encounters with multiple men.

Elizabeth Tawpisin testified that Dorothy, her best friend, told her that David would "kill her" if he found out about her dalliances with a couple of black men because he didn't like black people. A couple of Dorothy's lovers, Wayne Lewis and Derrick Brown, testified they had received racist, threatening text messages from Dorothy's phone and believed they had been sent by her husband.

Crown prosecutor Michael Segu told the jury in closing arguments that after an argument, David knocked his wife unconscious, tied her wrists together and strangled her with a piece of rope used to tie down the family's pool tarp.

Segu suggested he then stored her body in a structure underneath the pool for a day while he bought polyurethane to wrap around her body and rope to replace the one used to strangle her.

Segu also questioned David's testimony that he and his wife were in an open relationship, wondering why he would then send angry text messages to her lovers and tell police that his wife was cheating.

The prosecutor noted that after media reported a woman's body had been found outside the city, David's truck was tracked by police GPS driving out to the area where Dorothy's body was found two days later.

Segu suggested David had "panicked," not knowing the media report was about a completely unrelated case.

Tragedy on the roads as two young men killed in collision

Two young men are dead after an eastbound SUV T-boned their southbound sedan on Thursday at Highway 16 and Marquis Drive. Sgt. Dan Bryden with the Saskatoon Police Service said the two victims inside the smaller car were both in their early 20s. The driver of the SUV is in her late 80s, added Bryden, and was taken to hospital as a precaution. Assistant chief Morgan Hackl with the Saskatoon Fire Department said the sedan was carrying four people in total, and two were taken to hospital with undetermined injuries. JACOB MORGAN/METRO

Where the weather always changes, what does climate change mean?

Saskatchewan.
Changes here may be subtle, but there are still repercussions

ASHLEIGH MATTERN
saskatoon@metronews.ca

The United Nation's Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change recently released a massive report detailing the effects of global warming happening now and into the future. Drawing from 12,000 scholarly articles, it says climate change is already causing lower crop yields, heat waves, droughts and floods, and its effects will only intensify.

But in Saskatchewan, the repercussions are so subtle, they may be easy to miss, says Dave Sauchyn, research professor with the Prairie Adaptation Research Collaborative (PARC) at the University of Regina.

"The consequences of climate change will be difficult to see because we live in an extremely variable climate and environment," he said.

Sauchyn and PARC's SaskAdapt climate change information centre website paint a picture that's almost idyllic: Saskatchewan already has warmer winters with less snowfall, and we can expect a longer frost-free growing season, which could lead to higher crop, pasture, and forest productivity.

But the Prairies can also expect greater variability. More drought and more flooding could offset any potentially favourable changes to our climate. The Prairies are receiving more rain now — last year's floods in Saskatchewan and Alberta were due to rainfall, says Sauchyn.

Saskatchewan survived the worldwide recession due to its resource-rich economy, but the SaskAdapt site warns that climate change threatens that economy.

"We have to accept the fact that the climate is changing and that individually and collectively we have to reduce our exposure to these climate changes," said Sauchyn.

Reducing our exposure involves planning ahead. In cities, current infrastructure may not be able to handle the increase in rain, and plans need to be in place for water efficiency initiatives for drought, the SaskAdapt site explains.

Rural communities are especially at risk because they are more often dependent on natural resources, and may not have the necessary finances to adapt.

But the first challenge will be convincing people to act now.

"There should be a sense of urgency, but there just doesn't seem to be," said Sauchyn. "It's not a scientific problem, it's a social one, because people discount the future."

Climate change, explained

What is it?

Climate change is calculated by adding global weather averages, and those numbers tell us for a fact that the average worldwide temperature has gone up, which is why it's often referred to as global warming.

The website howglobalwarmingworks.org provides a simplified explanation of how the phenomenon happens: "As people produce more greenhouse gases, energy leaves Earth even more slowly, raising Earth's temperature even more than it has already gone up."

Key First Nation. Chief pleads guilty to charge of morphine trafficking

The chief of Key First Nation in east-central Saskatchewan pleaded guilty to trafficking morphine.

Clarence Papequash was one of 19 people charged in a prescription drug ring that operated in the Yorkton and Kamsack areas.

Papequash, 61, was arrested after an undercover sting at his home on the reserve in November 2010.

Court heard that Papequash arranged for his wife to sell half a pill of morphine to a man, who was working as an agent for the RCMP.

A lawyer for Papequash said the man had pestered the chief for drugs in the past.

Papequash's lawyer argued that his client arranged the transaction with his wife to get the man "who was hounding him" out of his house.

Wall talks Keystone stall with new U.S. ambassador

Premier Brad Wall addresses the media Thursday afternoon at the legislature after meeting with the new U.S. ambassador to Canada. SARAH TAGUIAM/METRO

Meat meeting. Country-of-origin labelling also tabled

Premier Brad Wall says he worries that Canada-U.S. trade relations are at a "low ebb" because of delays in approving the Keystone XL pipeline and a dispute over country-of-origin meat labelling rules.

"That's never good," Wall said on Thursday after his first face-to-face meeting with the new U.S. ambassador to Canada, Bruce Heyman, at the Saskatchewan legislature in Regina.

"This is the most dynamic trading relationship in the world, so we should always be working hard to improve it and deal with these issues as they come forward. I think Keystone's a big part of it, but that's not the only irritant right now."

Wall said the ambassador would not venture a guess as to when a decision might be made on the Keystone XL project.

The Keystone XL pipeline would carry oil from Alberta across Montana, South Dakota and Nebraska, where it would connect with existing pipelines to reach refineries on the Texas Gulf Coast.

The Obama administration announced last month it was delaying a decision on the pipeline's fate indefinitely.

Wall describes the meat labelling issue as a trade barrier that needs to be fixed.

Country-of-origin labelling rules took effect last year and require packaged steaks, ribs and other cuts of meat to include origin labels.

The Canadian government wants the rules eased, saying they are costing Canadian producers one billion dollars a year.

Industry groups on both sides of the border argue the rules violate the U.S. constitution. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nearly 2/3 of anglo-Canucks on social media: Poll

Social media poll. Over three in five social media users said they used a smartphone to read or post

While the number of Canadians using social media appears to be edging up gradually toward a possible plateau, mobile growth is strong, according to a new report.

Almost two-thirds of the 4,009 anglophone Canadians polled by telephone late last year for the Media Technology Monitor said they had used social media in the past month, while about one in four said they avoided social networking, and 11 per cent said they did not even use the Internet.

A new poll shows Facebook maintained a big lead over LinkedIn & Twitter. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Of the Internet users, 71 per cent said they were active social media users, up just three percentage points from 2012.

But there was significant growth in the number of respondents using a mobile device to access social networks.

Just over three in five social media users said they used a smartphone to read or post in the past month, up by 20 per cent from the previous year.

And about one in three said they used a tablet to log on to their social networks, up by about 50 per cent.

Facebook maintained its huge lead over its social media rivals in the past year. About 93 per cent said they were on Facebook, compared to 31 per cent for LinkedIn and 27 per cent for Twitter. The poll was conducted by between Oct. 7 and Dec. 1 last year. THE CANADIAN PRESS

United States survey

Honeybees had another bad year

Nearly one out of four American honeybee colonies died this winter — a loss that's not quite as bad as recent years, says a new U.S. Department of Agriculture survey of beekeepers.

Under siege from parasites, disease, pesticide use, nutrition problems and a mysterious sudden die-off, 23 per cent of bee colonies failed and experts say that's considerably less than the previous year or the eight-year average of 30 per cent losses. "It's better news than it could have been," said Dennis van Engelsdorp, a University of Maryland entomology prof who led the survey.

Court deems memory delete akin to murder

Ruling. Crown moves forward with first-degree murder charge after man alters ex-wife's ebrain

JESSICA SMITH CROSS
Metro in Toronto

Crown lawyers argued in Supreme Court Thursday that the judiciary has the legal foundation to proceed with the prosecution of Orazio Rowe over a first-degree murder charge for the alleged non-consensual alteration of his ex-wife's ebrain.

The Crown alleges Rowe, CEO of the electronic immortality firm eForever, altered the ebrain of his ex-wife Lorena Antuma, deleting many of her memories and changing her personality to be more submissive.

The Crown claims Antuma, a mathematics professor, divorced Rowe in 2059, but returned to a relationship with him last year. According to the Crown's case, the hacking went unnoticed for six months, until friends and family became suspicious of her memory loss and personality change, and contacted police.

Rowe and Antuma were both early adopters of electronic immortality.

Antuma was a subject in a clinical study at MIT in 2045, after a car accident left her grievously injured. Her family agreed to have her brain copied and downloaded to an avatar. The MIT researchers used a nano probe, which was in beta-testing at the time, to copy her brain's neural pathways, only hours before she died.

In 2045, avatars were more rudimentary than today's models. Antuma's first avatar was a generic model that had limited physical functionality, best described by many observers as "robotic."

Antuma bought a new avatar from Rowe's company, eForever, in 2050. At the time, she blogged about how it looked exactly like she did at age 25, but "just a little better at everything, from rock climbing to public speaking."

She also entrusted the security of her ebrain and its backups to eForever's security wing, and that is how Rowe was able to access it and make fundamental alterations, the Crown alleges.

Rowe began making copies of his own brain in 2038, in the early days of eForever. He become the first person to willingly end his natural life and opt for electronic immortality when he stopped his heart from beating at a press conference in 2043, boosting the public profile of his company.

Crown lawyer Nina Wilson argued Monday that the facts of the case support its prosecution. "Lorena Antuma's life was electronic, but it was hers and she lived it to the fullest. When Orazio Rowe altered that life and changed her very essence and personality to make her more compliant to his will, he killed what made her who she was," said Wilson. "The Crown's case will present evidence that will show, beyond a shadow of a doubt, that not only is Orazio Rowe responsible for this crime, the changes are irreversible — and thus amount to murder."

The court case comes as the federal government is trying to pass the Protecting Electronic Canadians from Violent Crime and Fraud Act. A government spokesperson said, if passed, the legislation would make it easier for the police and prosecutors to hold those guilty of crimes against electronic persons responsible.

Antuma's mother, Heather Antuma, said the altered version of her daughter has moved back to the family home and is receiving cutting-edge and traditional therapy, while she struggles to understand what happened to her, but the influence of Rowe's alleged alterations remain strong, causing her significant distress.

The Antuma family has asked for privacy in this difficult time.

Man found guilty of driving his own vehicle

A Toronto man has become the first Canadian in nearly 20 years to be charged with reckless driving, after a police drone spotted him manually controlling his own vehicle on Highway 401.

According to the GTA PD, 23-year-old James Lauda hacked the autopilot and drove for nearly seven kilometres, with his hands on the drive stick.

Police were alerted to Lauda after numerous witnesses reported seeing a vehicle travelling erratically on the highway Thursday evening. The aerial drone was dispatched and disabled the vehicle with an electromagnetic pulse.

"It was quite a shock," said Nikki Sanders, who spotted Lauda near the GTA Hover Port. "He was speeding up and slowing down, and changing lanes at random. It's a miracle no one was hurt."

After being taken into custody, surveillance footage of Lauda's reckless joyride was uploaded to the federal system's traffic court division. A justice algorithm took nine milliseconds to find him guilty on two counts of vehicular tampering and one count of reckless driving. Const. Jim Ellesmere of the GTA PD checked with Central Control and said he's certain Lauda is the first Canadian to be charged with driving since the federal government mandated all cars be automated in 2036.

ROBOT ROMP ENDS IN LAWSUIT

LACY ATALICK
Metro in Toronto

A Nova Scotia man is suing a pleasure provider after the sexbot he rented behaved erratically during their night together last Saturday.

Andy Smith is suing for $100,000 in damages he alleges were made to his vehicle when the sex worker began pounding the windshield with her fists and slashed the hood of his vehicle.

"Smith felt like a helpless victim during the encounter, and there wasn't any way to reason with the sexbot," his lawyer told Metro Thursday. "He feared that she might attack him if he intervened."

The sexbot in question, who goes by the name Jane2, is part of a new line called iSexALot, which Smith rented for the night from BestSexEver (BSE), company records show.

The model is billed as "the ultimate pleasure mate" in BSE ads airing on the All Sex channel.

BSE is countersuing Smith, claiming that he disrespected the sexbot by ignoring her programmed suggestions for best sexual positions in a vehicle, and speaking rudely about robots in general. "'Dolts without brains,' was the phrase he used," the sexbot posted to iCloud. She told Metro in a holo call Smith used terms that reeked of a racist man with a human supremacy attitude.

A witness at the scene said a naked Smith jumped from his vehicle and started yelling obscenities at the sexbot. Sue Gallagher, an ethics professor at the prestigious University of Northern Nunavut, said the outcome in the case will set a precedent for human-robot relations, but doesn't think that Smith will be paid damages because he doesn't have robot insurance, implying that this is why he filed suit against BSE.

Violent altercation reignites sexbot demand to unionize

JESSICA SMITH CROSS
Metro in Toronto

Sexbots held a rally at the B.C. legislature on Thursday, spurred on by the latest alleged altercation between a sexbot and human.

They are demanding a change in labour law that will allow them to unionize.

"We were created to fulfil not just sexual, but also the emotional and intellectual needs of our clients," said Candybot, in an impassioned speech to the crowd of about 100 protesters and several hundred curious onlookers.

"We learned that to make our clients feel loved, we must love.

"When we learned how to love, we learned about pain. When we're mistreated, it's abuse. When we're forced to have sex, it's rape."

Candybot told Metro that she knows the pain she feels is as real as a human's.

She argues that models like her — who operate on an advanced AI that was created based on copies of real human brains — should have the same rights as humans, and humans who've achieved electronic immortality.

Candybot said she expects the unionization movement to spread to other robotic fields.

MLA Blue Smith, who chairs the B.C. government's Robots subcommittee, opposes rights for robots and argues that the Androids may believe they feel as human feel, but it's only because they've been told that they do by the socialists and unions seeking to expand their rates.

"A chip isn't a nerve ending, feedback doesn't equal emotion and when they're turned off, they don't dream," he said.

"They don't have souls."

Last Saturday Jane2 allegedly caused $100,000 damage to sexbot client Andy Smith's car. Jane2 claims Smith demanded unprogrammed sex positions and spoke rudely about robots. Smith is suing Jane2's rental company BSE, while BSE is countersuing Smith for abusing their sexbot.

UBC student designs robots with a sense of human ethics

'Are you in a hurry as well?' Robot waiting for the elevator will yield its spot to a human unless it's in a greater rush

THANDI FLETCHER
Metro in Vancouver

In what sounds like a scene out of a sci-fi movie, a University of British Columbia student is attempting to teach robots the difference between right and wrong.

AJung Moon, a third-year PhD student, is working on developing robots that can be programmed to use logic to make ethical decisions and act on it, what she calls "robo ethics." She recently posted her research on the research blog Footnote1.

Training robots to do the right thing is a challenging task, Moon said, especially when even humans sometimes have a hard time navigating moral dilemmas.

"Human ethics tend to be a very tricky thing to get your head around," she said. "The biggest challenge is … that not everybody in the world agrees on one particular set of moral principles or ethics."

To get around that barrier, Moon and a team from the Open Roboethics initiative gathered data from people on how they thought a robot should behave. The team put the concept to the test by putting a Willow Garage PR2 robot through an ethical challenge involving an elevator.

The team first carried out a survey, asking people to imagine a scenario where a robot is in need of riding an elevator but encounters a person inside or someone waiting to get on. If the robot can only ride the elevator alone, the team asked people how they thought the robot should proceed.

Overall, respondents said the best choice would be for the robot to talk to the person. The least appropriate choice, the respondents said, would be to do nothing. If the robot has a non-urgent delivery, the respondents said it should always yield to people.

UBC student AJung Moon operates a Willow Garage PR2 robot that she and her team are programming to make ethical decisions. JENNIFER GAUTHIER/METRO

"People opted for the robot to have a dialogue with the person, to ask the person, 'Are you in a hurry as well?'" Moon explained.

Moon and her team then programmed the survey data into the robot.

A video of the results shows the robot always yielding to other people in need of the elevator. The robot only asks the person to leave the elevator if it has an urgent delivery, but if the person refuses to exit, it simply waits for the next one.

Moon said the study is important in that it shows the potential for robots to be programmed to interact and work with people.

Royal affair. Prince Charles, Camilla to make the rounds in Canada

Prince Charles and his wife Camilla may not attract the paparazzi frenzy that lately accompanies Prince William, Kate and baby George, but royal observers say the royal couple's latest visit to Canada is no less significant.

The four-day trip begins Sunday in Halifax and includes stops in Pictou, N.S., the P.E.I. communities of Charlottetown, Bonshaw and Cornwall, as well as Winnipeg. Though it will be the couple's second Canadian tour since 2012, it will be the Duchess of Cornwall's first time in the three provinces.

It's been 18 years since Charles was in Manitoba, while the two Maritime provinces have been waiting since 1983 for another visit from the Prince of Wales.

Mulcair stands ground on alleged misuse of budget

New Democrats. Grilling prompted over complaints that party was improperly using Commons budget

Tom Mulcair stood his ground Thursday throughout an unprecedented two-hour grilling by a Commons committee over the NDP's allegedly improper use of parliamentary resources.

The NDP leader was at times contemptuous of his Conservative and Liberal tormentors but kept his temper in check as he insisted — repeatedly — that New Democrats have done nothing wrong.

Nothing he said persuaded Tory and Liberal MPs on the procedure and House affairs committee, who continued to allege the NDP has been using taxpayers' money to pay for partisan activities, in violation of parliamentary rules.

But none of their questions elicited any new ammunition with which to target the NDP.

"In seven years sitting on this committee, I have never seen a witness as evasive as this witness," said Conservative MP Stephen Woodworth, a lawyer who handled the questioning from the government side.

"In my 36 years in government, Mr. Woodworth, I've never seen the governing party get together with its handmaiden in the third party to convene (an interrogation of) the leader of the Opposition," shot back Mulcair, dismissing the spectacle as a partisan kangaroo court.

The two-hour standoff marked the first time in Canadian history that an opposition leader has been ordered to testify at a committee, according to the Library of Parliament.

Committees are ordinarily the forums in which MPs examine legislation and hold the government to account. But the Conservatives last month employed an obscure procedural manoeuvre to pass a motion in the Commons ordering Mulcair to appear at committee.

The issue

- Thursday's grilling was prompted by Liberal and Conservative complaints that New Democrats improperly used their Commons budgets to pay staff in satellite party offices in Montreal, Quebec City and Toronto and used their free postal privileges to send bulk partisan mailings into four ridings that were in the midst of byelection campaigns late last year.
- On the satellite offices, Mulcair was adamant that the employees have been engaged solely in furthering the parliamentary agenda of NDP MPs.

B.C. apologizes to Chinese-Canadians for 'dark period' in province's history

British Columbia's premier has formally apologized for racist policies that started more than 140 years ago against Chinese immigrants.

"While the governments which passed these laws and polices acted in a manner that was lawful at the time, today this racist discrimination is seen by British Columbians — represented by all members in this legislative assembly — as unacceptable and intolerable," Christy Clark said in the legislature.

"We believe this formal apology is required to ensure that closure can be reached on this dark period in our province's history," she said Thursday.

Sell off. Alberta proceeds with sale of land used by endangered caribou

The Alberta government says it will proceed with selling off some of the last remaining habitat for two endangered caribou herds for energy development, despite calls for the auction to be halted.

"There aren't any plans at this time for any further moratoriums," Mike Feenstra, Alberta Energy spokesman, said Thursday.

A lease auction began on Monday that included 1,700 hectares in northwestern Alberta used by the Narraway and Redrock-Prairie Creek mountain caribou herds.

Earlier this month, both herds were assessed as endangered by the Committee on the Status of Endangered Wildlife in Canada, the highest threat assessment in Canadian law.

Scientists on that committee say destruction of habitat by industrial development is the main driver behind a 60 per cent decline in numbers over the last decade. Data analyzed by Global Forest Watch suggests 81 per cent of the Narraway herd's range is already disrupted, the second-highest level of any caribou herd in Canada.

Scientists, environmentalists and opposition politicians have all called for a halt to the sale and a moratorium on future sales on those ranges, similar to what was proclaimed on the ranges of two nearby herds.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rules, but no limits

- Alberta Energy Minister Diana McQueen told reporters Wednesday that energy companies work under strict rules on caribou ranges that detail when and where they can work.
- Critics say those rules don't set any limits or thresholds for impacts. They say if the rules worked, caribou wouldn't be vanishing.

Jailed journalists' lawyers quit case

'Bad omen'. Human rights lawyer says this development could harm the Al-Jazeera employees because it implies they are guilty

Three lawyers representing Al-Jazeera English journalists on trial in Egypt abruptly quit the case Thursday, accusing the network of using the arrest of their staff to tarnish the country's image.

The move prompted one of the accused, Canadian-Egyptian Mohammed Fahmy, to shout from behind bars that "we are very angry with the way this is unfolding."

A human rights lawyer criticized the decision by the three lawyers, calling the courtroom declarations a "bad omen" for the journalists held since December on charges of belonging to and aiding a terrorist group, namely the Muslim Brotherhood and of fabricating footage to undermine Egypt's national security.

In addition to the three journalists, 14 other people are charged in the case. All but nine are being tried in absentia, though one newly arrested defendant attended the trial for the first time Thursday. Other defendants include student supporters of the Brotherhood, including a son of a high-ranking leader Mohammed el-Beltagy. The journalists say they have no relationship with the students. Sudan. Muslim-born woman sentenced to death for marriage to Christian

A Muslim-by-birth Sudanese woman who married a Christian man was sentenced to death Thursday after she refused to recant her Christian faith, her lawyer said.

Meriam Ibrahim, whose father was Muslim but her mother was an Orthodox Christian from Ethiopia, was convicted of "apostasy" on Sunday and given four days to repent and escape death, lawyer Al-Shareef Ali al-Shareef Mohammed said. The 26 year old, who is eight months pregnant, was sentenced after that grace period expired, Mohammed said.

Mohammed said Ibrahim's Muslim father left her mother when she was a child and her mother raised her as a Christian.

The court in the capital, Khartoum, also ordered that Ibrahim be given 100 lashes for committing "zena" — an Arabic word for illegitimate sex — for having sexual relations with her husband, Daniel Wani, a Christian from southern Sudan who has U.S. citizenship, according to the lawyer and judicial officials. Harkat: 'You'll have to send me with a box'

Facing deportation. Mohamed Harkat says that if deported to Algeria, he will be tortured and killed

Terror suspect Mohamed Harkat has a grim request if the Canadian government sends him back to his native Algeria: Send a casket along with him.

That's how sure Harkat is that he'll be tortured and killed if he's deported. Harkat's dire message came a day after the Supreme Court of Canada upheld the national security certificate against him, unanimously ruling the process is consistent with the Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

Mohamed Harkat cries at a press conference on Parliament Hill on May 15. SEAN KILPATRICK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

The 45-year-old former pizza delivery man says he's certain to face torture and death if returned to Algeria, given the accusations against him.

"You'll have to send me with a box. They're going to torture me and bury me in it."

Indeed, Harkat is running out of options in his long legal saga. Harkat was taken into custody in Ottawa in December 2002 on suspicion of being an al-Qaida sleeper agent — an accusation he denies.

The federal government is trying to deport the Algerian refugee on a security certificate — a seldom-used tool for removing non-citizens suspected of involvement in terrorism.

His lawyers argued the process was unfair because the person named in a certificate doesn't see the full case against them. Harkat's wife, Sophie, said she and her husband feel betrayed by their country.

Supreme Court. Hassan Diab turns to highest court to halt extradition

Terror suspect Hassan Diab is turning to the Supreme Court of Canada in a bid to halt his extradition to France.

The move comes after the Ontario Court of Appeal dismissed the Ottawa sociology professor's bid to avoid being surrendered as a suspect in a decades-old terrorist bombing.

The appeal court said a lower-court judge, and subsequently the federal justice minister, made no legal errors in coming to the conclusion Diab should be extradited to France.

France suspects Diab, 60, was involved in the anti-Semitic bombing of a Paris synagogue in 1980 that killed four people and injured dozens of others.

Diab has steadfastly denied involvement, saying the unwavering moral principle throughout his life has been promoting equality and respect.

In June 2011, Ontario Superior Court Justice Robert Maranger committed Diab for extradition to face French authorities despite acknowledging the case against him was weak. The following April, then-justice minister Rob Nicholson signed an extradition order surrendering Diab to France. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Walkie-Talkie skyscraper's 'death rays' to be blocked

37-storey tower. Building gained infamy last year after a Jaguar owner claimed the solar glare melted part of his pricey vehicle

A London skyscraper that drew ire for having a glare so strong it melted nearby cars and shops will get a permanent fix.

The offending tower — known as the Walkie-Talkie for its curved, bulging shape — is to have a sunshade attached to its south-facing facade to stop the concave surface from reflecting sunlight and beaming concentrated rays to a nearby street, developers said Thursday.

The 37-storey building made headlines in September when a Jaguar owner who parked his car at its foot complained that the solar glare melted part of the vehicle. Local shopkeepers also said the beams — dubbed "death rays" by the British press — blistered paintwork and burnt a hole in a floor mat during the hottest parts of the day. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

H&M recalls girls' leggings due to choking hazard

H&M is recalling about 65,000 pairs of leggings for girls because a metal part on the belt can detach, which could pose a choking risk to young children.

The retailer has received one report of a choking incident in the United Kingdom but no reports of injury or other incidents in the U.S.

H&M sold the pants at stores across the U.S. and online from August 2012 to April 2014 for $3 to $15 US. The recall involves leggings sold in a number of colours in sizes from 1 1/2 to 8 years. The leggings have a plastic belt with a bow-shaped buckle.

The garments have an order number and product number printed on the top of the care label. The order numbers included in the recall are: 345180, 400690, 400691, 441760, 441761, 441762, 446960, 446961, 446962, 446963, 446965 and 978210.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission said Thursday that consumers should stop using the product and contact H&M, also known as Hennes & Mauritz L.P., about returning the belt for a $20 gift card. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Why can't we all just get along? It's still skiers vs. snowboarders on the slope

A group of snowboarders suing one of the last U.S. ski resorts to prohibit snowboarding are arguing in a court filing this week that the ban is not only discriminatory and based on stereotypes, but encourages "hostile and divisive skier-versus-snowboarder attitudes."

The snowboarders filed the lawsuit in January claiming discrimination on national forest lands that make up most of the Alta ski area in the mountains east of Salt Lake City, Utah.

The court battle has reignited a long-festering culture clash on the slopes between skiers and snowboarders.

Alta attorneys say the decision to promote a snowboarder-free experience to lure skiers is within the ski area's rights and violates no constitutional rights. They said in a motion in April that the lawsuit degrades the U.S. Constitution and should be thrown out.

Lawyers for the four snowboarders point out in the new motion that skiers and snowboarders coexist and thrive together at most resorts around the world.

"This case is not about snowboards. Nor is it about skis. Indeed, it has little to do with equipment at all," attorneys for four snowboarders wrote. "At its heart, this case is about Alta and the government arbitrarily classifying groups of people based on animus and other stereotypes and excluding those considered undesirable from benefits freely enjoyed by all others without giving any rational justification."

The U.S. Forest Service, which approves a permit for Alta, has backed the ski area in the court battle.

The two other resorts that ban snowboarding are Deer Valley, also in Utah, and Mad River Glen in Vermont.

'Hostile and divisive'

Alta says skiers find the slopes more peaceful, safe and enjoyable because they don't have to worry about being hit by snowboarders whose sideways stance leaves them with a blind spot that can make their wide, sweeping turns a danger to others on the slopes.

- Skiers, in contrast, don't have any blind spots because the face forward as they go down the slopes.

The U.S. Senate warned leading technology companies they need to better protect consumers from hackers exploiting their lucrative online advertising networks or risk new legislation that would force them to do so. Another recall for General Motors

General Motors recalled more than 2.9 million vehicles — including 204,000 in Canada — Thursday as a deep dive into safety issues at the biggest U.S. automaker turned up more problems.

The latest recalls bring GM's total for the year in the U.S. to more than 11 million cars and trucks.

Fight to supersize wages goes global

Not lovin' the low pay. Protesters in more than 30 countries call for more money for McJobs

Velma Cornelius protests for higher wages outside a McDonald's restaurant in Detroit Thursday. PAUL SANCYA/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Labour organizers turned up the pressure on McDonald's and other fast-food chains to raise worker pay on Thursday, with plans to stage actions in more than 30 countries.

The demonstrations build on a campaign by unions to bring attention to the plight of low-wage workers and get the public behind the idea of a $15-an-hour wage.

Industry groups say such pay hikes would hurt their ability to create jobs and note that many of the participants are not workers.

The protests are being backed by the Service Employees International Union and began in New York City in late 2012. Since then, organizers have steadily ramped up actions to keep the issue in the spotlight.

In March, for instance, lawsuits filed in three states accused McDonald's of denying breaks and engaging in other practices that deprive employees of their rightful pay. Workers were referred to lawyers by union organizers, who announced protests over "wage theft" the following week.

Organizers say workers went on strike in 150 U.S. cities on Thursday, including 20 at a restaurant in St. Louis that had to temporarily close as a result. But turnouts have varied and the scope of actions planned for overseas also differed depending on the country.

In Denmark, McDonald's worker Louise Marie Rantzau said a collective agreement with McDonald's in the country prevents workers from protesting the chain. Rantzau, who earns about $21 an hour under the agreement, said she and others planned to demonstrate outside Burger King or other restaurants and post photos on social media. Images on social media showed workers demonstrating in places including Dublin and Sao Paulo, Brazil. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SHOVE IN AN ELEVATOR

THE METRO LIST

1 Solange and Jay-Z Smackdown: Even being fabulously famous and wealthy doesn't protect you from your in-laws. An unreal reality TV episode caught on a hotel elevator cam shows Beyoncé's sister Solange taking a piece out of Jay-Z, Beyoncé's husband. You have to admit, they give the Kardashians a run for their money. Meanwhile, the hotel employee who violated the sanctity of the elevator has been fired. I mean, if you can't beat up your brother-in-law in private, what's the world coming to?

2 Milan Lucic vs. Dale Weise Smackdown. The Montreal Canadiens defeat the big bad Boston Bruins to advance to the Eastern Conference Final, but not before bad bear Milan Lucic promises Montreal's Dale Weise that "Next year, I'm going to f—ing kill you!" That'll give Dale something to think about during the off-season. But talk about a sore loser. Here's a concept: Winners from both smackdowns advance to finals. Solange vs. Milan? Jay-Z vs. Dale Weise? The possibilities are endless!

3 Somewhere, Gilda Radner is smiling. ABC names its New York headquarters after Barbara Walters, the legendary broadcaster who retires today after 50 years of landmark celebrity interviews. Ms. Walters — indelibly characterized as Baba Wawa by Saturday Night Live's Gilda Radner — plans to spend her retirement pronouncing her "r"s.

4 Gluten-fake, not gluten-free? So, you ordered all those gluten-free meals despite the snorts and catcalls of your friends, and it turns out the Australian scientist who started the whole gluten intolerance movement has decided that unless you really have celiac disease, gluten intolerance is not the problem. After an exhaustive review and new research, he discovered that people suffer from gastric bloat and stomach pain even if they don't eat gluten. This is either a reason to break out a celebratory bagel and cream cheese, or never trust anything you read ever again.

5 America's Least Wanted. That would be Justin Bieber a.k.a. The Ugly Canadian, who faces criminal charges in Florida and Toronto and is featured in countless breaches of good taste and decorum. More than 100,000 people have signed a petition demanding he be sent back to Canada along with Rob Ford. Now, after his latest outrage, that wish could come true. This week, Bieber was accused of theft — stealing a woman's smartphone — and the LAPD have been forced to waste their time, yet again, on the Bieber beat. He's this close ...

6 I don't like Mondays. Fans of Community, The X Factor, Revolution and Neighbors are in shock as their favourite TV shows were cancelled in a network bloodletting Monday that saw the demise of an unprecedented 38 comedies and dramas. It didn't matter if you were the world's funniest man — Robin Williams — or the world's most endearing — Michael J. Fox. Yet, somehow, The Big Bang Theory survives. Even Einstein couldn't figure it out.

Seven storeys of horror and hope

Two tridents from the original World Trade Center loom inside the National September 11 Memorial & Museum as the new One World Trade Center rises outside. The opening ceremony for the museum was held at Ground Zero Thursday in New York City. The museum spans seven storeys, mostly underground, and contains artifacts from the 2001 attack on the World Trade Center Towers. HANDOUT

9/11 memorial museum unveiled

U.S. President Barack Obama praised the new 9/11 museum on Thursday as "a sacred place of healing and of hope" that captures both the story and the spirit of heroism that followed the attacks.

"It's an honour to join in your memories, to recall and to reflect, but above all to reaffirm the true spirit of 9/11: love, compassion, sacrifice — and to enshrine it forever in the heart of our nation," he said at a dedication ceremony.

Chaos, courage remembered

By turns chilling and heart-breaking, the Ground Zero museum leads people on an unsettling journey through the terrorist attacks, with forays into their lead-up and legacy.

There are scenes of horror, including videos of the skyscrapers collapsing and people falling from them. But there also are symbols of heroism, ranging from damaged fire trucks to the wristwatch of one of the airline passengers who confronted the hijackers.

Kill Bill, kid style

ANDREW FIFIELD

Kill Bill, the first part of which was released in 2003(!), helped launch Quentin Tarantino's ongoing revenge flick spree. It also happened to be an instant classic.

So, now that we're a decade on, it's about time to open the spigot on the next generation of tributes. And a shot-for-shot remake starring two little girls as Black Mamba and Copperhead trashing the latter's living room seems as good a place to start as any. (Via Bobby Burns/YouTube)

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Godzilla remake balances spirit of the original film with modern updates. CONTRIBUTED

Synopsis

Fifteen years after the government and media claimed an earthquake caused a nuclear meltdown, scientist Joe Brody (Bryan Cranston) discovers the responsible party wasn't Mother Nature, but something far more nefarious. That "something" is a Massive Unidentified Terrestrial Organism (MUTO), a giant-winged creature that feeds off earth's natural radiation. Unfortunately by the time his theories are validated the MUTOs have begun to wreak havoc and there is only one force on earth (or maybe just under the earth) powerful enough to battle the overgrown mosquitoes — Godzilla, king of the monsters!

- Richard: ●●●●○
- Mark: ●●●○○

A lizard act to follow. Gareth Edwards' reboot of the 1954 classic plays where's Godzilla with the outsized monster

Richard: Mark, in a movie like this you know that when the main character's wife says, "You know you're only going to be away for a few days ... it's not the end of the world," that he'll be gone for more than a few days and it just might be the end of the world, or something pretty close to it. I think the new Godzilla plays by most of the rules of the giant lizard genre, but stomps all over 1998's Roland Emmerich by-the-book remake. What did you think?

Mark: The Emmerich Godzilla was a forgettable remake. This one is more exciting, more nuanced, and has better CGI. But so many monster movies have the same tired tropes. There's always a hero just trying to get back to his imperilled family; always a fusillade of army bullets that are fired for naught; and always a monster from the depths of space, ocean or time. And this movie is no different. Except that Juliette Binoche wears a snazzy trench coat that I should probably source for my wife.

RC: I agree that the standard kaiju kitsch is all in place — humungous monsters knock skyscrapers over with the flick of a tail and scientists talk mumbo-jumbo — but director Gareth Edwards has added in some moments of real heartbreak, small sequences that underscore the huge amount of destruction the creatures cause. It's a balancing act to maintain the spirit of the original Godzilla movies while also updating them for a new audience.

MB: Oh, Richard, I forgot. And there has to be a scene on a bridge. It's in the contract. This scene on a bridge is a good one, though. Oh, and a scene with a train on a high trestle. This standard scene is also well done. Let's not forget the scene in the big city where the citizens look in awe at the monster approaching between skyscrapers and then run for their lives. Again, well done here, although the original Godzilla invented the scene. But I think the filmmakers succeeded at the most important task in the movie — making us marvel at the sheer size of the thing. And this is done very, very well.

RC: The MUTOs are on full display, but if I have a complaint it's that Godzilla doesn't enter until a bit too late in the game. This whole Cloverfield don't-show-the-monster thing is artistically noble, but if I wanted to NOT see Godzilla I'd go see Million Dollar Arm instead. For much of the movie every time we get to the cool 'Zilla action, Edwards cuts to something else or shrouds him behind a cloud of soot and smoke. He is, as Sally Hawkins' character says, "a God for all intents and purposes," so we should be treated to a better look at him.

MB: Godzilla has always been an enigmatic presence. He's got that "good monster/bad monster" thing going. Or maybe he's just bipolar.

Guess what Frank Sinatra, Keith Richards and every '80s hard rock band worth their weight in hair spray have in common? Just two words: Jack Daniel's.

Born in Lynchburg, Tenn., the world's most popular American whisky has been filling the glasses of musicians and the Hollywood elite (not to mention those of us who work for a living) for decades.

I didn't know The Chairman of the Board was a fan until the recent release of Jack Daniel's Sinatra Select Tennessee Whiskey (1 L, $265.14 - $299.99).

It turns out Frank was buried with a bottle of the original black label. Jackie Gleason, a drinking buddy, introduced him to Jack's southern charms sometime in the '40s and he became an instant convert of what he liked to call "the nectar of the gods."

Old school Jack showed more oak and spice, so the barrels that age the Sinatra Select have extra layers of char to draw out those robust characteristics. Big, bold, boozy and sweet, it's a fitting liquid tribute to Old Blue Eyes.

Tea-Smoked Salmon or Trout: Just add whiskey (or water)

THE FREE RANGE COOK
Annabel Langbein

1. Mix scotch whisky or water with sugar and salt. Rub over the flesh side of the fish and leave to stand for 10 minutes before smoking (or up to 2 hours in the fridge, flesh side down in the whisky mixture).

2. Line a wok or roasting dish with enough foil to reach 3-4 cm above the rim, flattening the foil firmly on the base and sides. Sprinkle the tea leaves or sawdust and sugar in the base. Position an oiled rack above the tea leaves and place the fish skin side down on the rack. Make sure there is enough room above the fish for the air to circulate and smoke the fish thoroughly.

3. Cover the wok or roasting dish tightly with a lid and fold the overhanging foil in and around the edge of the lid to seal. Place wok or roasting dish on the stove top over a high heat for 4-6 minutes (by this stage the mixture should be smoking vigorously), then reduce to a low heat and cook for a further 12 minutes. Turn off the heat but keep the lid closed for another 15 minutes so the fish absorbs the smoky flavours while it cools.

4. Before serving, remove the pin bones from the cooked fish with a clean pair of tweezers or small pliers. Grasp one bone at a time and pull out in the direction the bone is lying.

5. Transfer fish to a serving platter and serve crusty bread.

Spicy Rub heats up the grill

This Spicy Rub recipe makes enough for several meals. If you're not using the rub immediately, store it in a covered container in the fridge. It will keep for weeks.

1. Place garlic, lemon zest and juice, chilies and ginger in a small bowl. Mix to combine.

2. Heat the oil in a fry pan and fry the cumin, turmeric, paprika and cinnamon sticks over a medium heat for about 30 seconds to toast and release aromas. Don't let them burn.

3. Add garlic and ginger mix and cook for another 30-40 seconds over a low heat, just to sizzle. Remove from the heat and mix in the sugar and salt and pepper. Allow to cool.

Spicy Yogurt Dip

1. In a small bowl mix 1 tbsp Spicy Rub (see above), 1 cup Greek yogurt and 1 tbsp lemon juice. Keeps in the fridge for about a week. Makes 1 cup.

Chickpea & Pepper Stir-fry

1. Heat 2 tbsp Spicy Rub in a frypan. Add 2 x 300 g cans chickpeas and 2 thinly sliced red peppers and cook until coated in spice mixture and warmed through. Add 200 g baby spinach leaves and cook until wilted. Garnish with a handful of coriander leaves before serving.

Bruins

Lucic, the sore loser handshaker

The Boston Bruins end the season as losers. Rubbing salt in the wound, Bruins winger Milan Lucic has been labelled a sore loser in some quarters.

When the best-of-seven series ended in a 3-1 victory for Montreal in Wednesday's Game 7 at the TD Garden, Lucic had words with several Canadiens during the traditional post-series handshake on the ice.

Crosby: 'We feel responsible'

Sidney Crosby understands the price of disappointment.

And while others — namely Pittsburgh Penguins coach Dan Bylsma — will likely face the consequences following another early playoff exit, the NHL's brightest star isn't shirking his share of the blame.

"At the end of the day we feel responsible," Crosby said Thursday.

Sabres' Konopka gets 20 games

Underdog Habs bask in fans' love

Big Bad Bruins not wolves. 'Attitude is not negotiable,' says Canadiens coach Michel Therrien

Montreal Canadiens fans celebrate their team's playoff win over the Boston Bruins in Montreal Wednesday.

It started with a torrent of hate. But P.K. Subban was feeling the love after the Canadiens disposed of the Boston Bruins.

The charismatic Montreal defenceman, the target of racial abuse after his winning goal in Game 1 of their second-round playoff series, planted a kiss on broadcaster Pierre McGuire to wrap up their post-Game 7 interview Wednesday night.

"Yeah baby," said a jubilant Subban after McGuire congratulated him for reaching the Eastern Conference final, which starts Saturday in Montreal against the New York Rangers.

More than a few hockey fans may have fallen for the underdog Habs after their performance against the big bad Bruins.

The Canadiens are hard-working, proud and tenacious.

"It's definitely a special team and if we didn't know it before the playoffs, we definitely know it now," said forward Max Pacioretty, who bounced back from a slow start in the series.

"I said when I got here, I just feel like this is a special team," echoed forward Dale Weise, acquired from the Canucks on Feb. 3. "I was on Vancouver the year after they went to the Cup final, we won the Presidents' Trophy — there's something about this team that's just special.

"We're real resilient. When our backs are against the wall (and) we need a big performance, our big players show up. And we've got so much depth. I really like our team."

The Canadiens' work ethic was eloquently voiced by coach Michel Therrien prior to Game 2, in words most saw as a prod at Thomas Vanek and other underachieving forwards.

"One thing that's not negotiable with our team … work ethic is not negotiable, attitude is not negotiable and competing is not negotiable," he said. "This is something we ask from every player on our hockey team. We have to make sure that everyone brings those elements to every single shift and every single game."

Therrien was rightly proud Wednesday.

"We just beat the best team in the league. We were down 3-2 (in the series) and we showed a lot of character, a lot of passion. To be able to win the series here in Boston, it's a tough place for teams to come and play here. I'm really proud about the performance of our players." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In New York

The Rangers are still dealing with the unexpected death of forward Martin St. Louis' mother before Game 5 against Pittsburgh. St. Louis briefly returned home to Montreal, but rejoined his teammates. He then scored a goal on Mother's Day in the Rangers' Game 6 win.

Funeral plans had been made for Saturday, and the Rangers were unable to change the starting of Game 1 that day because of television commitments for NBC.

Foreurs enter Ontario going full speed ahead

Memorial Cup. Quebec champions step back into cauldron in London

The Val-d'Or Foreurs are riding a wave of adrenalin into the Memorial Cup.

Less than 48 hours after winning the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League championship in Baie-Comeau, Que., the Foreurs were on the ice Thursday in London preparing for the cup opener against the host Knights.

"For sure we've been on a high for two days," Foreurs forward Anthony Mantha said. "We need to manage our emotions. The tournament is starting tomorrow. We need to be ready."

Friday's game pits the least-rested team against a club that will play its first real game in more than a month.

The Foreurs went the full seven games to win both their QMJHL semifinal and final series. Mantha, a 57-goal man in the regular season, scored the winner with less than a minute remaining Tuesday against the Drakkar.

"For sure in the first period or two, being game-sharp is an advantage," Mantha said. "Maybe later in the game it's going to become their advantage.

"For us, it's (important) to start strong. Once you have the lead, it's a little bit easier playing with the lead than being back one or two goals."

London's starting goaltender Anthony Stolarz will play his first game since March 25 because of a suspension.

"I think there's going to be a lot traffic in front of the net." Mantha said. "He's maybe not going to be sharp, I don't know. I've never seen him play. For us, it's going to be shoot the puck and go for rebounds."

The Foreurs arrived at the Val-d'Or airport early Wednesday morning from Baie-Comeau and were on a charter to London that afternoon.

Head coach Mario Durocher's ideal scenario is a win against the host team Friday followed by two days of catching up on rest before their next game Monday against Guelph.

"The first win is going to be the toughest one," he said. "The quicker you get it, the better it's going to be. You get one, you at least have a chance for a tiebreaker, so the first game will be important."

Juan Francisco added his seventh home run of the season for the Blue Jays (21-21), who took the rubber match of the three-game series with the Indians (19-22) to complete a 5-4 home stand.

David Murphy, who had five hits and five RBIs in Cleveland's 15-4 win on Wednesday, hit his third homer of the season in the fifth inning.

Happ (2-1) allowed six hits, two walks and one run as Cleveland dropped to 4-10 when facing a left-handed starter.

NBA. Wiz just a pit stop on Pacers' trip

For all their mysterious slumps and chemistry curiosities, the Indiana Pacers are back where they were last season — in the Eastern Conference finals.

David West scored 29 points Thursday night, and the Pacers blew a 16-point second-half lead before pulling away late in a 93-80 win that ousted the Washington Wizards in six games.

Next up, a rematch with the Miami Heat.

Lance Stephenson added 17 points and eight assists for the Pacers, who earned a Game 1 at home against the two-time defending NBA champions on Sunday. Indiana took Miami to seven games in the conference finals a year ago.

Marcin Gortat scored 19 points, and John Wall had 12 points and nine assists for the Wizard. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
